CONTENTS OF YOUR WILL

7. Executor(s)

Your Executors are responsible for administering your estate. You can appoint up to four Executors. We recommend you appoint someone who knows your situation well (i.e. spouse), as often they are aware of your assets and the whereabouts of your papers. You may also wish to appoint another person to act alongside them to reduce the administrative burden at this difficult time. We can be appointed as an Executor and would be happy to act in this capacity. By appointing a professional Executor (i.e. us) you can have peace of mind that your estate will be administered correctly, but it is not mandatory, just recommended.

8. Trustees

A Trustee can also be an Executor. A Trustee is a person who holds your property on behalf of your beneficiaries while your estate is being administered and holds your estate for the benefit of any beneficiaries who are children until they reach the age of eighteen. If your Will creates a discretionary trust on the first or second death, your Trustees will make decisions regarding investing the trust assets and the distribution of capital and income to your beneficiaries. You can provide guidance to your Trustees in a separate letter of wishes, which is non-legally binding. So, it is important you choose your Trustees carefully and trust them to carry out your wishes as detailed in your letter of wishes.

We recommend you appoint a maximum of 3 and a minimum of 2 Trustees and you appoint someone who knows you well (such as spouse) as one of your Trustees. We also recommend a 'neutral' Trustee is appointed (e.g. a trusted friend or advisor) who is not a beneficiary under your Will. We can be appointed to act as Trustee if wished, as we have taken your instructions and drafted your Will, we can ensure your wishes are carried out and your estate is dealt with in the most tax efficient way.

Glossary of Terms

Whilst we try to keep the amount of legal speak to a minimum, some is unavoidable. Descriptions of some of words which may be used are:

Beneficiary	A person named in your will who will gain some benefit within it.
Chattels	These are generally personal items which are not used for business purposes. For example jewellery, grandfather clocks etc but also includes household items like washing machines, beds etc but excludes money or securities for money though.
Conditional gift	These are gifts which will be given to nominated people provided they satisfy the condition(s) for it. For example a gift to a proposed executor on the condition they take up the position of being a/the executor.
Estate	Everything you own (in part or completely) falls within your estate and should be dealt with within your will. What will be distributed however will be everything less any debts.
Executors [female form = Executrix]	People who you will carry out the instructions contained within your will. They can be selected to act on their own (Sole Executor) or jointly with other nominated executors. They cannot be forced to become executors so you should discuss this with them first.
Guardians	People who will take over the legal responsibility for your children (if under 18) on your death
Interest	This means some form of benefit from something within your will, for example a house. There are various forms of interest. <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Interest absolute – a person who is given an absolute interest can deal with that interest as they like – it is quite simply absolutely theirs. For example if the interest was a house they could sell it. • Life interest – this is where the interest is only given during their life in which case the things they can do with it are limited. For example the house to a spouse and thereafter the children. The spouse has a life interest and the children a contingent interest. The spouse cannot sell the house without the children's permission (as it will go to them on the spouse's death) but the children cannot generally force the spouse to sell it either (as the spouse has rights to it whilst the spouse is alive). • Contingent interest – where the interest in the property will only arise when a contingency or condition arises. In the example above the children's contingent interest will arise when the spouse dies.
Legacy	What you are giving to people in your will. It generally can be specific (i.e. a particular piece of jewellery); pecuniary (i.e. money); or residuary (see remainder/residue below
Life time gifts	These are significant monetary or other gifts that you have made to others during your life although only the last 14 years is critical.
Natural children	Children who are of full blood relationship with you
Predecease	Where a beneficiary dies before the Testator
Property	Where a beneficiary dies before the Testator
Remainder/Residue	After you have given what you specifically want to give to people, there may be some elements of your estate remaining undistributed. This residue or remainder can then be dealt with in general or specific terms. For example, "the remainder of my estate to...". However, for tax and other purposes it is absolutely critical that there is a remainder beneficiary.
Testator [female form Testatrix]	You, i.e. the person making the Will
